MOE wants another sewage plant study

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The Minister of the Environment is being manipulated by people who are against expanding the Haliburton sewage treatment plant, Dysart council said upon hearing that another study is needed before expansion can be considered.

"It seems the minister, (Ruth Grier), has been briefed by someone who's very opinionated against the project," says Dysart Reeve Bill Davis. "I don't think Dysart's side has been presented."

"There's a bureaucratic game being played," said Councillor Murray Fearrey. Other studies, with terms of reference approved the (now required) addendum to your report contain a comprehensive assessment of water quality."

This is necessary to receive a Certificate of Approval, and funding is available from the ministry to complete the study. Capital costs may also be funded.

"She's set us back at least a year," said Davis, who along with council, feels the only option is to have a meeting with the minister. She was not at the recent Rural Ontario Municipalities Association conference.

In 1989, Dysart paid Totten, Sims, Hubicki to do an environmental impact study on what would happen if lodges along the north shore of Kashagawigamog were hooked up to the sewage treatment plant. The report said the increase in effluent would be counterbalanced by a decrease in sewage seeping into the lake from present septic systems.

"It's our commitment to protect the water quality," Davis said of council's willingness to do a Pollution Control Plan.

This was challenged by the chain's lakeshore property owners' associations and people within the ministry. As a result, the MOE then surprised resort owners by

CAS board threatens to quit over funding

by MARTHA PERKINS

The board of directors of the Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society has thrown its funding crisis back in the lap of the provincial government by threatening to resign.

The Peterborough-based service had reached the limit of its $725,000 line of credit and needed another loan to pay its staff, president Roy Wood said in a telephone interview. "We think the workers deserve more security than that."

In a letter to the Minister of Community and Social Services, Zanana Akande, Wood said "We have effectively arrived at a position of financial bankruptcy. Therefore the Board serves notice that in the absence of a formally approved operating budget adequate to sustain Society operation without deficit (except as unavoidably related to volume), the Board will resign on February 28, or at the point that a cash flow problem would make it impossible to meet our obligations, whichever is later.

"(No one) can be expected to bear the burden of the chaos and dysfunction which unfortunately characterizes the present funding process."

This doesn't mean that agency doors would close, Wood says, but that the agency would be under direct ministry control. "The province will have to do it on its own and become responsible for the operation of the CAS."

"Our service would not suffer and the staff would be protected," says Executive Director Bob Penny. He is hoping the board won't resign but cautions "they are dead-by the MOE, have received 80 per cent funding from the ministry "so they must have approved" the previous studies. "It's double talk coming out."

"The scope of this project has changed significantly since it has been confirmed that the private resort lodge owners have withdrawn from the project," says Grier in a letter read by council Monday.

"As you are aware, staff in our ministry are deeply concerned with the water quality in the Kashagawigamog chain," Grier continues. "Additional loading to this system of water through expanded sewage treatment works was not, in our opinion, satisfactorily assessed in your previous Environmental Study Report."

"It is therefore imperative that

Rails' End asks for help to cover deficit

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Even art gallery patrons are tightening their fashionable belts during the recession, leaving the Rails' End Gallery in a deficit position once again.

Fundraising projects, such as the summer and Christmas sales, and purchases of art from both exhibition rooms were down this year, Virginia Muenzel told Dysart council Monday as she made a plea for an infusion of up to $12,000.

Realizing they were in trouble, the Guild of Fine Arts began cutting costs in September. The secretary-receptionist was laid off mid-December, although book-keeper Norma Douglas has had to work more than three days a week as a result. The Guild hopes to get by with two full-time employees and one student in the summer, instead of three employees. Volunteers will also be more heavily depended upon and more local artists will be featured, which will also reduce spending.

"In essence, while we have carefully managed to reduce our expenditures by three per cent, our revenue, unfortunately dropped by 17 per cent," Muenzel said. By the end of the fiscal year, March 31, the deficit will likely be $7,600, instead of the threatened $15,000, which would have occurred if costs had not been cut. Unfortunately, this also means dipping into the $11,000 capital reserve fund, which was the result of a banner year in 1989.

The upcoming year promises to be even more challenging.

"Insult was added to injury," Muenzel said, "when our curator, Holly Hutchison, attended a general meeting for the Ontario Association of Art Galleries. . . It was the curator's dubious task to report to us the distinct possibility of serious cut-backs or even total cut-offs" from the Ontario Arts Council.

Last year the OAC gave the Rails' End $12,000, and while the same amount is being applied for this year, Muenzel said "We can't count on receiving anything."

In addition to a conditional grant from Dysart to "help us sustain one of the most viable, educational and culturally important organizations in this community," the Guild may also have to ask Dysart to pick up where OAC may leave off.

"It is not our desire to have to come begging to Dysart for bail-out money, but . . . if our OAC funding is not forthcoming, we shall have no recourse," Muenzel said. The grant would help ensure the gallery doesn't lose its artistic and educational integrity, or its "viable attraction as a well-publicized tourist draw. . ."

"It is with deep pride that we frequently mention the support we receive from our municipal council, and we hope you take as much pride as we do in what we have mutually been able to achieve."

Council will take the request into consideration during budget deliberations.

Fire guts Minden video store

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

An early evening fire Wednesday severely damaged Leon's Video Place on Minden's Main Street.

Anson, Hindon and Minden Fire Chief Don Booth estimates the fire, which destroyed most of the store's videotapes, caused $20,000 to $30,000 damage to the building.

Sixteen volunteer firemen spent close to two and half hours making sure the fire was under control. "We didn't want to see it rekindle itself and guarded against it," he said.

It is believed the fire was accidental and started in a storage room. While the building's exterior was hardly damaged, Booth said much of the electrical wiring and panelling was destroyed.

"The ceiling is coming down, it's a real mess," said Joyce Wright, who owns the video store with her husband Leon.

She estimates at least 1300 to 1400 videos were lost in the blaze but is thankful no one was hurt. "It was a blessing."

Her husband's uncle, Morris McKelvey, who resides in the apartment attached to the store, was not home at the time of the fire.

"We're in complete shock. We don't know what we are going to do," said Wright.

The Wrights have operated the video store in Minden for close to eight years and have not decided if they are going to rebuild.

"We haven't had a chance to sit down and talk about it yet," she said.

The total cost of the fire is not known until the Wrights' insurance company finishes its investigation.

ly serious. They definitely will pack it in."

There are 171 children, 13 of them from Haliburton County, who are in the Kawartha-Haliburton CAS's residential care. "It's a small proportion (of the total caseload) but providing residential care soaks up 44 per cent of our budget, or just under $3-million," says Penny.

Since the announcement on Thursday, Wood says Victoria-Haliburton MPP Dennis Drainville has phoned, promising to try to arrange a meeting with Akande. The ministry has also agreed to provide funds till the end of the month, but

Wood says the board will not be left dangling from month to month. The board wants assurance the fundamental funding problems will be addressed. "We're pushing for revamping of the funding mechanism" where the province pays for the costs of children in care, and "we look after the cost of administration (including salaries)."

Wood says the recession, which places more stress on families, and the province's success in promoting disclosure of abuse have contributed to the CAS's problems. If there is a need, the CAS cannot turn away clients, and many agencies like to put a strong emphasis on prevention as well. "We take them in because there is no choice."

In Haliburton, the senior staff worker, Ken Munks, is now spending only two days a week at the local office. The other three days are spent in Peterborough. Haliburton's caseload is down, but Penny acknowledges the staff has always spent a lot of time on prevention.

"We support the idea of them doing preventative work but the difficulty is the province is not supportive," he says. With limited staff resources, the CAS has had to shift Munks' responsibilities — temporarily.

The only other cost-saving option would be to reduce staff, which Wood says would be unfair to the staff — who might leave for more secure positions — and dangerously disruptive for the children in CAS care.

Ninety per cent of the costs are for salaries and adequate residential resources for children. Since 1987, the CAS has accumulated a debt which now threatens to reach $1-million.

Another problem is that the CAS agreed to pay foster parents $17 a day per child, although the ministry will pay CAS only $14 a day.

"The foster parents have told us they'd not provide the service at $14," says Wood, who adds foster parents in neighbouring districts are paid $17 a day. "If we don't pay $17 a day, these kids are going to go into group homes and they cost $65 a day."

The CAS decided to go ahead with the $17 rate without a promise the ministry would pick up the slack because "we knew we were saving money in the long term."

MOE red tape holds up plant saying that in the first stage, they could only hook up existing units. Resorts had been hoping to expand to help defray hook-up costs, which for some resorts, ran into the tens of thousands of dollars. Now, only after water quality was ascertained by another study would additional units be allowed, if they'd be allowed at all.

When the ministry wouldn't back down, most resort owners would not sign papers agreeing to those terms.

Fearrey also noted that in the original plan, the ministry had approved expanding the plant after the resorts had been hooked up. If the lake was supposed to have sufficient capacity for that, why wouldn't it have the capacity now that the resorts won't be included, he asked.

"There's not unanimity among the ministry about the quality of the plant," Fearrey surmised.

"They're arguing with their own guidelines," Deputy-reeve Lloyd Leadbeater said.

In jest, Fearrey concluded "Maybe they're worried about all the extra effluent the new hospital beds are going to cause."

American snowmobiler drowns

Thinning ice claimed the life of a 37-year-old New Jersey man Sunday night when his snowmobile hit open water on Halls Lake.

Stephen Bizub's two companions managed to make it to safety following the accident at about 9 p.m. but Bizub went missing. His body was recovered Monday by OPP divers.

"The ice conditions are poor this year," says Minden OPP Sgt. Art Goard. He said driving on an unknown lake, especially at night, is dangerous.

"A snowmobiler has to have knowledge of the lake he is travelling on."

Goard suggests calling ahead to local snowmobile clubs or local fishermen to find out what the ice conditions are for a particular lake. "Each lake is different."

'WE ARE LUCKY TO HAVE HIM,' said David Hatton of the Peterborough CNIB as he handed Gooderham's Ron Barr a plaque to commemorate Barr's involvement with the local blind.

As a high school student, Barr offered to help a fellow student who was blind and has been doing what he can since then. This includes acting as chairman of the CNIB's Haliburton County Advisory Board after school inspector Archie Stouffer retired some 30 years ago.

"Ron is really 'Mr. CNIB' in Haliburton County," said Hatton. "He knows all the blind in this area and they know him."

The plaque also kicks off the White Cane Week campaign to promote public awareness regarding the blind. The wording on the plaque is both written and in Braille.

"I've already made a spot for it my office," said Barr as he proudly accepted his reward.

Former PoW asks for compensation

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

REG SCHOFIELD is not optimistic the Japanese government will pay him back for what he kindly refers to as four years of free labour.

The War Amputations of Canada filed a $4-billion claim last week which asks for compensation for more than 200,000 World War II prisoners of war and civilian internees from six Allied countries, including Canada.

If the claim is successful, people such as Mr. Schofield will get $20,000 (U.S.) each.

"We worked four years for them. Why shouldn't we get paid for it," says Mr. Schofield, who lives in Wilberforce. "But I don't think we're going to get it. The Japs never give anything away."

In 1941, Mr. Schofield was a gunner in the Quebec City Royal Rifles, one of the Canadian regiments sent to Hong Kong on Christmas Day to reinforce the British-Indian garrison from a Japanese attack.

Although the 2,000 Canadians were noted for their bravery and valour, there has also been criticism that their participation was ill-planned and fated for failure. Six hundred would die in the battle (including Elzie Henderson of Haliburton), 241 died in the PoW camps, and of the survivors, fewer than 600 are alive today. Many still suffer from psychological, emotional and physical wounds.

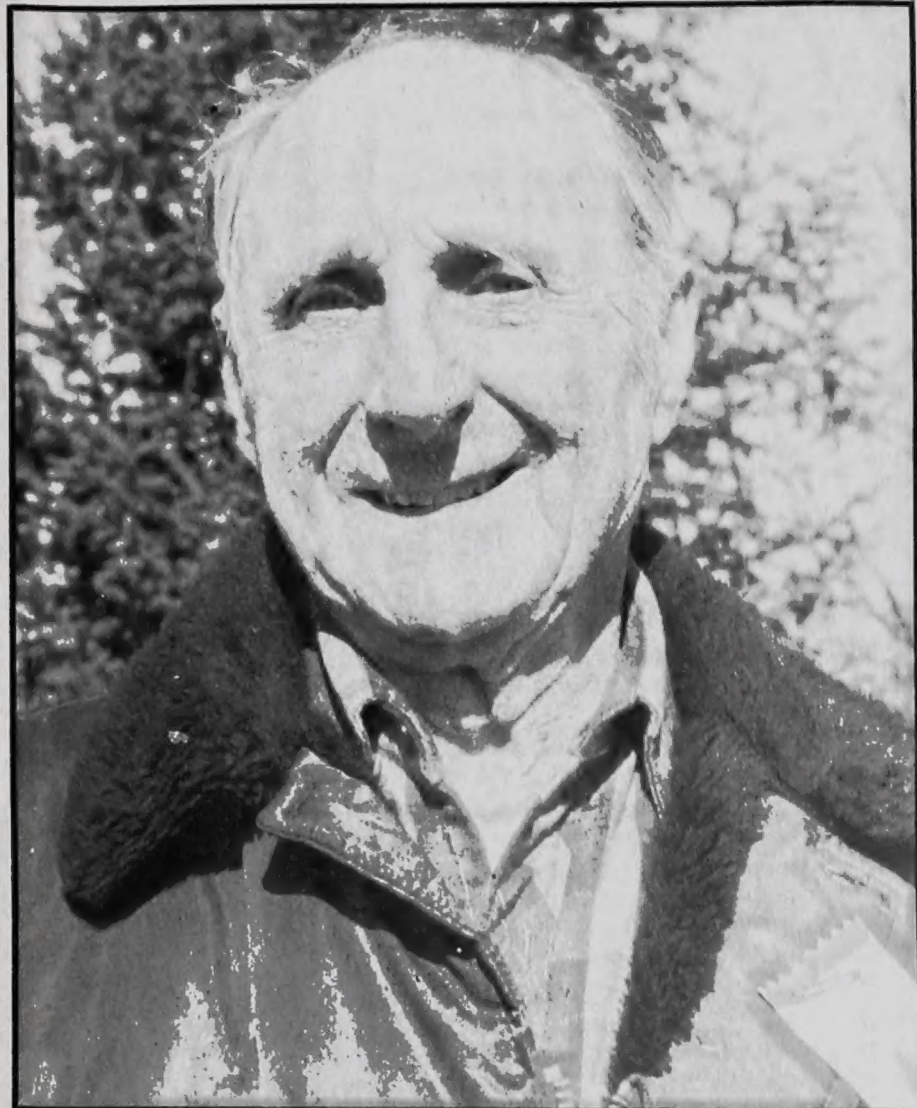

Mr. Schofield remembers the day in Hong Kong when Captain Clark called for volunteers. The Wilberforce native, as well as a German man from Niagara Falls put their hands up. (Mr. Schofield's memories come in bits and pieces, and usually he does not like to talk about the war.)

"At this time, mortars, snipers, and artillery were coming over so we took the hill (in Hong Kong.) We ran up the hill and threw six hand grenades and I got shell shock. The next thing I knew I was in St. Stephen's Hospital."

Because the Japanese were close by, Mr. Schofield had a premonition he should not stay long at the hospital so he left after two days.

Conditions at the Japanese Prisoner of War camps were infamously bad for the physical and mental health of soldiers who took part in the battle of Hong Kong. Wilberforce's Reg Schofield is in the back row, above the uniformed man's head.

'We worked years for the Japanese. Why shouldn't we get paid for it,' says Reg Schofield who stands to gain $20,000 US if a War Amps claim is successful. Mr. Schofield spent four years in a POW camp.

"When the Japs came in, they just massacred the whole bunch, only one person was left, a physical instructor from the Winnipeg Grenadiers. They murdered all the nurses and doctors."

There was another call for Canadian soldiers to drive trucks and ambulances. A Chinese woman "sitting on the stairs" told Mr. Schofield not to volunteer: "none of them would get there." He heeded her advice, which turned out to be true, and returned to his troop.

Despite their bravery, the Allies were soon taken prisoner. The Indians and officers were separated from the rest of the troops and Mr. Schofield spent the first year at the North Point Refugee Camp. Then he was transferred to a place he pronounces as Sham-chapeau on mainland China. In the middle of the war, they were transferred back to the island.

A 1964-65 study of survivors "described the psychological stresses and permanent damage suffered 'under deplorable conditions experienced by no other prisoner of war,'" says a Canadian Press story on the War Amps claim. The report also mentioned "four years of rough treatment, beatings and constant threat of torture in many forms, the stress of undernourishment, inadequate clothing along with forced labour under intolerable conditions."

"The Japs, they'd hit you," remembers Mr. Schofield. "They'd watch you all night and they were always hitting you with their gun butts. . . If they said you had to have 50 men working, if you had to take them out of stretchers, you'd take them. If you fell down, they'd hit you with four or five slaps."

One job for the prisoners was removing a hill which used to be a British cemetery, a fact which didn't bother the Japanese's conscience, says Mr.

Schofield. Along with Chinese prisoners, "we took the whole hill and put it in the water using a pole with a basket at each end. It took us six months."

During his four years at camp, Mr. Schofield also contracted diphtheria, malaria, dysentery and what he calls "berry berry." With wet berry berry, "you swell all up." With dry berry berry, "you get so hot you can't stand it." Mr. Schofield suffered berry berry on his feet. "I didn't put my feet on the ground for two months. I went around on my hands and knees." Respite would come in a tub of cold water.

In late 1945, Mr. Schofield was finally liberated. He was first sent to Manila, where Australian nurses began helping with the healing process. Mr. Schofield remembers a visit from Gracie Fields, a British singer. He was shipped to Esquimaux, British Columbia and then home to Wilberforce, where he married Winnie Schofield, The Echo's Wilberforce correspondent.

While it won't erase the pain of those four years, Mr. Schofield says with a laugh that it would be nice to receive the $20,000 U.S.

In the past, Japan has used 1951 and 1952 peace treaties as justification for not compensating PoWs. The Canadian Press article says, "Because Japan was economically bankrupt after the war, Allied governments worked out a deal under which the Japanese were liable to pay less than $1 a day for the four years. . . The War Amps' claim says the Allied governments unlawfully waived the rights of individual PoWs and civilian internees."

"The Hague Convention of 1907 and the 1949 Geneva Conventions both lend support to the argument that governments cannot sign away the legal rights of prisoners of war and internees to press for individual compensation."

War makes tourists stay closer to home

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

North America has become a viable travel destination as the Gulf war's threats of terrorism make travellers rethink plans for a European vacation.

"More people are concerned over their safety than money," says Linda Coneybeare, a travel agent for Fenlon Travel in Haliburton. She says taxes have made travelling in Canada and the United States expensive.

"We pay GST on North American trips but not to the Caribbean or Mexico," she says. "Try to figure out the logic on that?"

But high prices have not deterred travellers who want to feel safe when they leave home. "I have had several couples who go to England every year pass on it this year," says Coneybeare.

"Airports are a big risk," says Peter Cziraky also of Fenlon Travel. He says images of tanks at London's Heathrow airport make travellers extremely apprehensive.

"I have had a lot of people ask me 'Is it safe?'," he says. To ease their minds Cziraky offers statistics on how air travel is safer than car travel, sometimes to no avail.

"Some people are even leery about travelling in the U.S.," he says, and as result has cancelled several trips to Florida.

"People are still travelling, but they may take alternative trips," says Anne Larcade of Intra Town and Country Travel in Haliburton.

Instead of long vacations, travellers are taking mini-vacations for several days at a time to resorts and romantic hideaways.

"We have noticed only a mild decrease in travel. People are still going to Europe," she says, adding business came to stand still only for the first week of the war.

Her office is kept up to date on the latest travel advisories and trips are planned in accordance; this includes promoting flights on Canadian airlines.

"We haven't received any warnings on Europe," she says. Trips to the Middle East are virtually off limits.

But the Middle East was never a prominent destination for local travellers to begin with. Cziraky used to arrange at least one trip there a year and Coneybeare promoted a cruise down the Nile, but for obvious reasons doesn't any longer.

"There might be a bit of a boom for Canadian tourism as Americans get on the bandwagon," says Cziraky. "Canada still has its 'safe image'."

Local agents agree larger travel operations have been the hardest hit by the Gulf war and the recession.

To attract business some companies are slashing prices. "It's good for travellers but bad for agents," he says.

But Coneybeare says it's still buyer beware when it comes to wholesale travel offers. "You see these trips to Florida advertised in the Toronto papers for $169. After all the taxes this becomes $250. Wholesalers are really misleading the client."

Limited number of seats are also available and are picked up quickly.

LOOKING FOR LAUGHTER: After spending the first few days of the war transfixed by the television newscasts, people, such as Lindsay Coates, above, now want to turn their minds to the lighter side of life.

Videos help tune out war

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Excessive news coverage on the Gulf war has people flocking to their nearest video outlet hoping to find some relief.

"For the first few days after the war started people came in saying 'Give me anything to make me laugh'," says Donna Hodgson, manager of the Halco Video Store in Haliburton.

Most dealers noticed a drop in sales when the war first escalated and news broadcasts kept people riveted to Gulf coverage.

"The first week of the war everyone stayed at home and watched the news," says Nola Aanilko who rents videos from the Ingoldsby Junction Store.

But as the days wore on customers grew tired of the news and sought alternative diversions. This includes renting whimsical films and steering away from videos with traces of war in them.

"The majority of customers come in looking for comedies," says Hodgson. "They aren't interested in movies like The Hunt For Red October, or anything with fighter planes in them."

"I had one customer who said she couldn't even watch it after she rented it," says Aanilko. "It reminds them too much of what is going on."

"No one in their right mind want to watch movies that glorify war," says Lon Duncombe, owner of Halco.

He says the video rental business has begun to get back normal. "There is no day-to-day difference in video sales from this year than last," he says, adding the recession has virtually had no effect.

"It has affected the equipment end of it, but not the video."

Duncombe absorbs five per cent of the GST and even lowered his prices so video prices would only rise three per cent. It costs $3.30 to rent a new release for an evening, but some older films can be rented for 99 cents.

"I've adjusted my prices to accommodate the GST," says Aanilko. She lowered her prices 17 cents before the tax to $2.82. With the taxes added on it costs $3.25, a two-cent increase for customers.

Even with higher prices and the Gulf war, some dealers have not experienced a noticeable change.

"We rent a lot mostly on weekends," says Wendy Hales of Happy Holiday Variety in Carnarvon. "Cottagers come up here to relax and since most have just a TV antenna, they don't have the facilities to get in a lot of the war things."

As war coverage reverts back into regular news hours, the video rental business has begun to simmer down.

"People were just plain sick of it," says one clerk at local variety store.

Abortion is matter best left to the federal government, Dysart council said when asked to support a motion against funding free-standing abortion clinics.

The town of Tecumseh has "strong opposition" to the provincial government's plan to fund the clinics and thereby provide easier access for abortion. It was asking other municipal governments to support its fight against the funding.

"I think we should leave it up to the feds," said Councillor John Parish, to which Reeve Bill Davis added, "It's far beyond our mandate."

Loop Carnival celebrates winter

by WINNIE SCHOFIELD
Wilberforce Correspondent

HERE ARE A FEW HIGHLIGHTS of a fun-filled weekend. We begin Friday night at St. Margaret's Church where members from three church choirs are enjoying a hymn sing with favourite numbers played by Elsie Lewis at the organ. Guest singers in attendance are the Hughes boys.

Over at the Watson Centre, nine tables of euchre are in play while at the Arena, a skating party is taking place with some 35 persons in costume.

Saturday morning at the Centre begins a full day of activity. Sixty-eight bears have arrived and have taken their place before the stage. There are large bears, small bears, new bears, oldtimers and ancient bears, all dressed in a variety of costumes. Attached to some are printed life histories. One of the tiniest bears wears a thimble for a hat. Up on the stage Bessie Croft is showing films about bears to a group of children. One of the stories is, of course, Paddington Bear.

A raffle table is set up and another table displays crafts made by local people. Mrs. O'Rourke and her friends have material ready for children to use to assemble snow persons. A row of enthusiastic youngsters are hard at work. Julie Walsh of Wilberforce and Kenny White, small visitor at Silver Springs Cabins, make up prize winning snowmen.

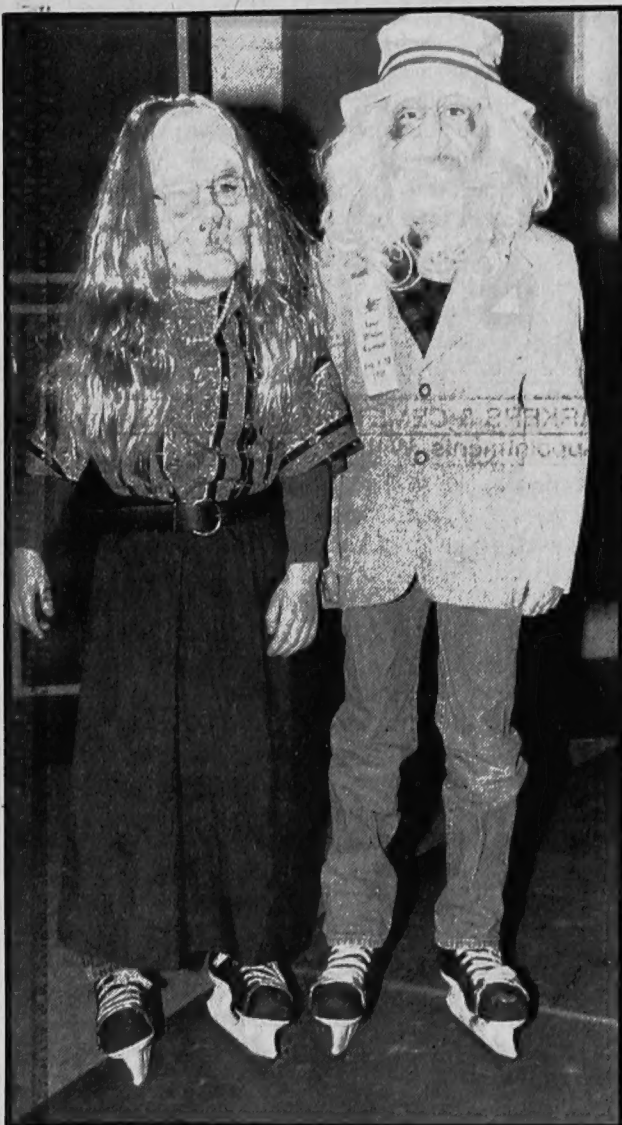

Ev Saxby, President of the Lions Club, gets people involved in the art of making ice candles, using milk cartons, crushed ice and parawax.

Very popular with the young crowd is learning how to make your own ice cream by combining milk, sugar and vanilla in a jar surrounded by chipped ice. Members of the Legion Ladies Auxiliary assist in this enterprise and note that as many as 14 children at one time are waiting to participate.

Get involved

When Haliburton's Winter Carnival folded a few years ago, there were few protests. Not only were the organizers and workers tired, but the carnival had lost much of its spark. There didn't seem to be much to do. Yamafest was supposed to be the season's saving grace the next year, but that was a money losing venture. For two years, February passed with nothing to brighten spirits except the promise of the upcoming March Break. Spring will soon be here, people sighed as they pulled their scarves a little tighter against their neck.

After those winters of hibernation, the recreational "movers and shakers" of the village have shaken off the doldrums and worked hard over the past months to breathe some life into the carnival. Some old favourites would be back — chili suppers, a dance, Skinanigans — and in an attempt to provide something for everyone, new events were added — bingo, cross country skiing race and bonfire to name a few.

But it's not enough just to say thanks to the organizers for all their hard work — and they have spent hours and hours pulling all this together. If people want to show their appreciation of these community events, they have to get involved. And once they get a taste of what this year's carnival has to offer, if they want another nibble next year, they can't be idle. Maybe they won't have to volunteer their time, but their suggestions for an improved carnival should be creative and helpful. We all know the person who complains there's nothing to do and then just sits there, waiting for life to happen. Like many things, you only get out of an event — a community, a relationship — what you put into it.

People who feel impelled to get involved aren't doing this out of the kindness of their heart. They want their community to feel like a community, to have people coming together, leaving the warmth of the fireplace behind as they are embraced by the warmth of that elusive thing called community spirit.

Out of the sand

Life was so much simpler when you didn't have to confront the darker side of our society. Because we would never abuse a child, there must be no such thing as child abuse. Luckily though, some people wouldn't keep quiet. The hurt and the pain which were suffered for years in silence are now being exposed for all to confront. It's time for us to take our heads out of the sand, but in doing so, we must also be prepared to accept responsibility for shedding some light on the problem.

Why do people abuse children? That will never be fully understood. Sickness or human nature stripped bare, we can never step into the mind of someone who has committed what many consider the worst social crime possible. What we do have to understand, however, is how society has allowed child abuse to happen.

The Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society has a budget crisis on its hands, and the immediate solution is an infusion of money. That will only be a quick fix because the underlying problem will still be there — more and more children (and the people who work with children, such as teachers and doctors) are disclosing abuse. Costs are up largely because the number of cases are up.

The new — and welcome — CAS philosophy is that you can't deal with children in isolation of their family. As well as treating the child, you must treat the people who have hurt the child. Likewise, we must realize that you can't deal with a family in isolation of society. There are common values which we can either promote or try to dismantle. In our rush towards personal liberty and rights of people to "do their own thing", we are forgetting our responsibility to children. They do not have the physical ability or maturity to protect themselves. Exposed and vulnerable to the worst of human nature, they need to know that we as a society will stand behind them.

So instead of simply petitioning the government to provide more funding to the CAS, we must confront why some people feel society will turn a blind eye to the abuse of children.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

To the Editor:

How can an editorial and Reeve Moore compare ambulance attendants with other municipal employees?

(1) Ambulance attendants are highly trained people, prepared to give life-saving medical care. They have a program of rigorous study behind them and must undertake regular up-grading.

(2) Other employees are not asked to risk their lives as ambulance people must be prepared to do — whenever they pull a snowmobile driver out of the water, for instance.

I recognize the good work done for us by other municipal employees, but let's sort the apples from the oranges. Our lives can depend on the skills and commitment of ambulance drivers. They deserve some financial recognition as well as our gratitude.

Cottage signs a tradition

To the Editor:

Cottage road signs should not be included in the proposed new sign by-law. They should not be destroyed.

They are tradition. They are part of our cottage culture. They are living, changing things. They are works of art. They are unique. They are easily recognizable landmarks. They should be protected as part of our heritage.

Cottage road signs are fascinating. They all have a history and are especially meaningful to the families that live on the cottage road. Many can remember with pride helping grandfather or father make and put up the sign that still proudly points the way to the family cottage. Cottage signs are a symbol of love of land, cottage and fun.

Cottage road signs are old. They have been a part of the landscape since this county's beauty first attracted our forefathers. They are a symbol of hospitality and the cottage lifestyle.

Haliburton isn't Toronto, our cottage roads are not the 401. They are different. Cottage signs make them so. Don't give us the sterile, conforming, boring signs of city life, proposed by the by-law.

It would be a sad day when the signs come down. It would be like losing an old friend. Leave them be!

Wayne Hussey,
Drag Lake.

Sexual abuse criminal

To the Editor:

Perhaps you could tell me what kind of a sick society it is that we live in?

I am referring to sexual abuse against little children and how our "agencies" choose to handle these cases. Recently, my friend's 5-year-old daughter and another young girl [they do not live in this county] were sexually abused (on separate occasions) by a group of seven or eight boys, aged 9 and 10 years.

Despite collaboration by an older witness, the police say that because these girls are "only 5", that they are "making it all up". Also in my friend's case, her daughter's twin sister had to stand by and listen to her sister's screams while being unable to help her. Needless to say, my friend's entire family is receiving counselling, while absolutely nothing is being done for the group of boys who did this horrendous thing!!

These children, like my own, learned about sexual abuse in the "We Care" program which has been implemented in most, if not all, school districts in Ontario. Our children are taught that everyone's body and feelings are their own and that no one has the right to touch them. It also teaches that if abuse occurs, the child is to tell a trusted adult immediately, despite any efforts by the abuser to "cover it up".

I feel that the "We Care" program is an excellent idea and long overdue. I commend our local school board for implementing it into our schools' curriculum.

My question is this: Why bother teaching our children to say "No" and report an incident, if no one in "authority" is going to believe them anyway? It's a very sad situation that needs to be remedied now.

Statistics show that one out of every three girls, and one out of every 4 boys in Ontario will be sexually assaulted before they reach the age of 18 years.

My friend lives in a small town, which is very similar to Haliburton. Please, don't fool yourselves

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

AFTER WAITING four years the people of Haliburton and surrounding area will have a dream realized this weekend when the Haliburton B.I.A. presents the 1990-91 version of the Haliburton Winter Carnival. Yes, it's been four long years since we have had a winter carnival and our hats are off to the men and women of the B.I.A. for reviving this popular winter event. In conversation with many local citizens and visitors, they leave me with the opinion that it's not winter without a winter carnival. It goes without saying that people are looking for something to do during those long winter months. In my opinion, the B.I.A. have a good three day programme lined up and I think that none of us should be looking for miracles this time around as the local group are just getting their feet wet in the winter carnival business. Each and every year the Haliburton B.I.A. hope to add new and better attractions to this winter extravaganza and I know the organization would be open to any suggestions you might have. We are proud to present to you, a special Haliburton Winter Carnival section which is included in this week's issue of the Echo. It's sixteen pages of photos, new items on many of the activities on the programme, a list of all of the events, plus advertisements from most business places in the area. When attending the carnival we hope you will drop in and patronize these advertisers who have made this supplement possible. All that is left now on the eve of the big weekend is my wish that you'll come out and bring the entire family for what we all hope will be three days of fun and entertainment.

The month of February is Heart and Stroke month and the Foundation plans to raise over $30 million this year, which will be mainly used to fund research and education programmes. Here in Haliburton County the local organization is asking you to help save lives and become a volunteer. They are asking you to help fight Canada's major health enemies, heart disease and stroke. Of the funds raised, 70 per cent goes to support 160 research projects and individuals, 14 per cent goes to fundraising efforts, 8 per cent is spent on prevention, intervention and rehabilitation community programmes, and another 8 per cent goes to administration costs. Fundraising is the primary goal this month of February and we hope everyone will dig down deep and give to this very worthwhile cause. You can make your first contribution this Saturday evening, February 16th by attending the Heart and Stroke Foundation Dance at the Legion in Haliburton. Music will be supplied by the ever popular local group "Ugly Rumour".

Friends of Herb Baker will be sorry to hear of his death which occurred at his residence in Haliburton on Wednesday, February 7th. He was born and raised in Haliburton and was in his 61st year at the time of his death. I was a friend of Herb's and in our youth we all hung around together. His main interest was hockey and for most of his life he played and lived the game. I followed with interest his hockey career which started in the minor ranks in Haliburton and he then moved up to be a star player with the Haliburton Huskies. He later moved on to Lindsay and played on the first line with the Lindsay Juniors. From here he had a tryout with the Galt Junior "A" club and played a few games with the team. He was also proud of the fact he played under the great Eddie Shore. Herb had the opportunity to move to Oakville to play hockey and sell cars for a large Ford dealership. He turned out to be a fan favourite with Oakville in the Senior "A" O.M.A. league and also went on to be one of the leading car salesmen at one of Oakville's largest garages. He loved to play golf, softball, hunt and fish. A few years ago Herb moved back to Haliburton and I always enjoyed meeting him in the restaurant where we would also take time out to reminisce the good old days. So long Herb, we'll miss you.

Thanks to Keith Jackson Real Estate Ltd. we are now able to see what the time is and tell how cold it is outside. The time and temperature sign out in front of the real estate office on the corner of Highland Street and Cedar Avenue has been out of operation for sometime, and local people really missed it while the sign was in for repairs. Now when you are driving or walking by, you can look up and see the time and temperature.

Here, there and everywhere. . . Bob and Lyn Thompson of Haliburton have returned home following a vacation at Fort Myers, Florida. . . A rink from Uxbridge won this year's PineStone Mixed Curling Bonspiel held at the curling rink in Haliburton on Friday evening and Saturday. . . Just a reminder to turn on those outdoor Christmas lights for the Haliburton Winter Carnival this weekend. . . Don't forget that carnival sweatshirts are still available from local merchants at $25 each. . . Bernie Nicholls is back in the New York Rangers lineup and this is good news to all the local hockey fans who will be attending the game in Toronto on March 2nd when the Rangers will be the visitors. . . Terri and Dean Curry of Haliburton were visitors to Cornwall over the weekend.

Bad luck stories for the 13th

WELL, IT ISN'T Friday, but it is the 13th. And this year it looks like the next combination of the two doesn't arrive until December. But there have been so many interesting bad luck stories piling up, that Wednesday the 13th will have to do.

It may not be bad luck to get married for most people, but there are some recent examples of some questionable starts on the road to a happy matrimonial life. Like Kenneth and Stephanie Miller, who thought it would be great fun to get married in a hot-air balloon.

They took off from near Lake Tahoe, Nevada, along with a pilot, minister, best man, and maid-of-honor for the ceremony. It may have been a marriage made in heaven, but shortly after the exchange of vows, they crashed into a tree and fell slowly to the ground. Fortunately, no one was injured.

Another couple may have done more than the Millers to bring bad luck their way. Jerry Conner and Sheila Boyd were having a very small reception in a New York City restaurant after their wedding. Another customer recognized them as the team that had robbed him and 17 others in a doctor's office the month before — and called police.

A couple in Edmonton really have the bad luck record for weddings as far as I'm concerned, and I can't really see where Karen Fraser and Jonathan Birch really did anything out of the ordinary. They might have had a warming months earlier, when the 250 invitations had to be reprinted after they came back minus the name of the mother of the groom.

Two weeks before the wedding, the groom found the two-year marine mechanic's course he was taking was being cancelled, with him just halfway through. Then they found the wrong ring had been sent to the jeweller. It turned up in Mississauga and got to Edmonton a scant two days before the ceremony.

Six days before the big day, the bride went to a fitting — and found she couldn't get into her wedding gown.

She had to buy an off-the-rack one for the ceremony — and still pay $1,000 for the original.

Three days before the ceremony, the groom was helping a friend start a 1955 Buick Special convertible to be used as the wedding car. The carburetor backfired and he suffered minor burns to his right hand. The same day, the three-year-old ring bearer broke out in a severe case of red spots — but got a medical okay to do his job.

The morning before the wedding, the oven blew up when the couple tried to cook a turkey to serve at a gift-opening do. And the night before, a passerby saw smoke rising from the church roof, where tar had been heated with a torch earlier in the day by workers — and saved the building going up in flames with a timely phone call to the fire department.

The fuss didn't delay the rehearsal, because the minister was late getting there anyhow. He got held up when he was stopped and given a speeding ticket. I'm sure you'll be happy to hear that the wedding DID go off without a hitch the next day!

But it doesn't have to be a wedding to attract bad luck. As a former radio promotion executive, I can really relate to a story from last December about a stunt at an NFL football game in Indianapolis. The name of the promotion person from WZPL-FM wasn't mentioned, which may be just as well, but I truly feel for him.

He got his terrific idea, see, where they have a field goal kicking contest at halftime of a home game with the Washington Redskins. He even got a sponsor tie-in with Pizza Hut, who were willing to come up with the prizes.

All we have to do is pick someone at random from the crowd, to attempt three field goals — one each from 20 feet, 30 feet, and 40 feet. Kick the first one, get a radio, Kick the first two, and get a radio, plus free pizzas for a year. Kick all three, ha ha, and Pizza Hut would give a free pizza to everyone in the stands.

Who did the random pick turn up? A guy named Mike Pierce, from nearby Darlington, Indiana, who once dreamed of playing professional football, but turned down a football scholarship from a small college in Kansas to get married.

You guessed it: he did it, and 58,000 people got free pizzas, while he got the radio and a year's supply. When he heard the applause, he said, "he felt important for 15 minutes of his life."

Good luck for Mike. Bad luck for the guy or gal from the radio station who planned the stunt. And being me, he's the one I tend to relate to.

Trapping a good romance

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

KATE AND RICK HAD invited Don over for supper and as usual it was behind schedule. Not that Don minded. He was up by himself, doing some inside work on his cottage and a change from wieners and beans was not hard to take, to say nothing of the company. While his hosts bustled around the kitchen, moving between the frig, stove and counter, Don sat at the table, beer in hand and kept the conversation flowing. He was feeling relaxed as only a week by the lake can relax.

They had been discussing interesting people they had come to know over the years. While Kate and Rick chopped, mixed and sliced, they'd throw out the odd anecdote. But mostly they listened to Don. He was a great story teller and because he had grown up in a different part of the country, his stories had a different flavour to them. Don always said you could read all the tales ever written but the most interesting were the true stories that happened to ordinary people.

The one about the trapper and the school teacher was a perfect example. When Rick and Kate heard it, they wished they had a tape-recorder to get it just as Don told them. They repeated it often to others but never felt they captured the tone that ran through Don's voice. As he spoke they could picture it all unfold, for Don was that kind of a story teller. It was also that kind of a story.

Back in the old days when trapping was a big thing in Canada, Montreal was where the big fur auction took place every year. There were other auctions in other cities, but Montreal was the big one.

It must have been quite the sight in that sophisticated city when the trappers came to town. As a group they were not known for their city ways and manners. In fact they were probably a pretty rough bunch, at least to look at.

There was one particular trapper, a man in his 60's. Whether he was closer to 60, 65 or 69 isn't clear. But he was not a young man. Somehow or other he managed to meet a school teacher down there in Montreal one year. She was no spring chicken herself, being in her 50's. How they ever found each other, coming from such different backgrounds, is a mystery and would probably make a great story in itself. One can only speculate, as Don said. Did their eyes meet across a crowded room, say a restaurant? Did she attend the auction with a friend and they met there? Did she drop a glove on the street, he stooped to pick it up for her and a conversation followed? Whatever happened, it must have been magic because of what eventually transpired.

She resigned her teaching position, packed up her worldly possessions and left with him as his bride. At 50 some years she walked away from her life to start a new and very different one. She brought her Waterford crystal to go live in a trapper's cabin on the shores of James Bay.

It had to have been a shock for her to see that cabin stuck out in the middle of nowhere. The isolation after the crowded streets and shops of Montreal must have been an adjustment. Besides her husband, her only other companion would have been the wind blowing long and cold through the trees, bringing storms and blizzards off James Bay.

On the other hand maybe she became his partner on the line. Any woman who, in those times, would uproot herself at her age to live in a trapper's cabin, would be just the kind to throw herself into the lifestyle completely. She'd have to or go mad. No doubt there were days when they'd have to dig themselves out after a heavy snowfall. And other times they would just about go stir crazy trapped in the little cabin by the weather. What did they talk about on those long winter days and nights? They had each lived almost an entire lifetime before meeting. Past loves, loneliness, distant families; did they talk of these? Did he become the teacher, sharing his knowledge of the bush and its ways: animal habits, how to tan hides, how to read a change in the weather? Did she ever use her Waterford crystal?

As he spoke, Don painted various possible scenes and more than once both Kate and Rick found themselves standing with hand in mid-air, transfixed by his images. He loved to throw out possible twists to the tale. Suppose, he suggested, just sup-

Thanking teachers

To the Editor:

Parents have suggested that the best way to improve education in this country is to give teachers the status, support and recognition they genuinely deserve. The Haliburton Home and School Association agrees.

The work done by teachers is the foundation of this country, for without them how would we educate our children to be the responsible citizens, scientists, artists, business people, construction workers and political leaders who make this country one of the best in the world?

February 10th and 16th has been declared National Teacher Appreciation Week in 1991 by the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation, of which our association is a member. Together with the other Home and School Associations and PTA-affiliates across Canada, we are recognizing the outstanding work being done by our school teachers. We hope that everyone in our community will take the time to honour our teachers for their commitment to education.

Susan E. Clarkson,
Vice-President and Secretary,
Haliburton Home and School.

PIC OF THE PAST

This week's photo shows Oswald Gliddon in 1928 standing beside the 1927 model Chev which was his first car. The picture was taken on the road into Haliburton Village, near the present Silver Maple Motel. The house on the hill in the background is near the present site of Bud and Dorothy Thayer's home, and the log piles are from Austin's mill which was on the lake across the road. This was the only car kept running one winter, with the help of chains on the tires. Photo and information courtesy of Bill Gliddon of Haliburton.

Children must be believed

To the Editor:

In response to H. Cook's letter of Feb. 6: We are sorry he feels shame and disgust, but beliefs and opinions should be based on facts from history and a lot more investigation than that produced by the North American, government-controlled media, especially during a world crisis.

Iraq's invasion of Kuwait may or may not have been legitimate, but the U.S. invasion of Iraq can never be justified. President Bush does not mention that Iraq had a very negotiable peace proposal for a possible total withdrawal from Kuwait, presented to U.S. officials from August to early January. Bush rejected any negotiation, and the press did not release this information.

The reason for missiles being fired at Israel is very clear. For the limited damage they can do to Israel, if Israel retaliates it might unite the Arab people. They have hated the Zionist movement, which preached that Jews should have their own homeland because of persecution. It was later resolved this land should be Palestine. Jews and Muslims lived in perfect harmony but when the political movement of Zionism was analyzed by the Palestinian Arabs, they knew they would lose their homeland. Muslims do not hate Jews, they hate Zionism.

Mr. Cook, you say "Shame on us unpatriotic 'supposed' Canadians." When we look at the shame put on the German people for being "patriotic" and for not seeing through the lies of their state-controlled media, we remember thinking "How could they have been so blind?" We now apologize to the German people because it is happening to us right now in North America. We want to be proud Canadians so let's demand all the truth before we decide who is invading whom. Is this not our right? The shame of making such a catastrophic mistake as the German people by blindly believing what their government was telling them, should have taught us something. Remember Nixon.

Fight for the unborn

To the Editor:

Everyone's eyes are looking at the War in the Gulf — Desert Storm. Praying for the Troops there. Wondering how many lives will be taken in battle.

Yet, there is a silent war going on, in the homefront and people have turned blind eyes to it and millions of babies have lost their right to live. There were no troops there to help them fight their war to live.

Our nations, our peoples, have become callous and hardened to some feelings of reality, to the truths of God. The acceptance of abortion and the apathy of the nations, the peoples and the church are astronomical.

We have become a perverse nation to allow such procedure to take place. At this time when we not only have an alarming increase of child abuse, but now also have abuse and murder of the unborn children to the point of it being legal.

Our nations will be held accountable for these lives, our leaders, our doctors, our nurses, the parents, grandparents and US if we do nothing.

I'm standing up now for that unborn child. Don't have an abortion. That life is too precious. That baby can't be tossed aside like a piece of garbage, that we can dispose of because it may be difficult to deal with. Murdering that innocent child is not the solution. There are a lot of people who can help. Some who have went through and know the misery and mistakes of their actions.

The troops in the Gulf have their armours in place and are fighting the war for their countries and the people. They are doing all they can to protect the nations of the world.

Let us, then, get our armour on and go to war in our nations for the lives of our unborn children.

into thinking that "it won't happen in Haliburton". It can and it does!!

Parents, please continue to street-proof your children, and believe them if they come to you with a report of abuse!! It has to start with us and then we have the responsibility to ensure that our children are listened to!!

We have four precious children of our own. The oldest two, ages 8 and 5, have been told all the details of what happened to my friend's daughter. Hopefully, armed with this knowledge, they will be a little more careful when they're away from us, and will be better able to protect themselves from such a situation.

MVA is insult to injury

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent last month to Anson, Hindon and Minden council.

Re: Proposed Market Value Assessment.

My lake front property was purchased through blood, sweat and tears some 22 years ago, at a time when market value assessments were unknown.

As a seasonal resident, I reside on Lake Kashagawigamog, approximately 4-1/2 to 5 months every year. I pay my taxes (including annual increases) on time. I contribute to the county's economy when purchasing materials and daily requirements, and I hire local trades-people to repair and maintain my property.

It is not often that I am forced to voice a complaint but the article published in the Haliburton Echo Dec. 19/90 has definitely raised my hackles.

Do you really have such little regard for "us" seasonal residents that you felt there is no need to notify us on matters such as this? Are we not to be given equal opportunity for our input into public meetings? It appears not!

Why is this proposed M.V.A. to be implemented quickly and why is it based on year 1988 when market values peaked to an all time high?

Have you considered how this will affect many cottage owners such as young families struggling to hold or retired persons or widowed seniors on a fixed income such as myself?

During recession times, why would you add insult to injury?

Doris J. Godard,
Lake Kashagawigamog

An anti-American bias

To the Editor:

Re: Editorial, Jan. 23rd, War & Peace

Pardon me, but I believe your anti-American bias shows. Nowhere in your editorial did I notice a mention of the huge contribution the Soviet Union has made in supplying Iraq with arms. You appear to single out the United States and ignore the fact that many countries, including Canada, are also guilty. Please not the arms suppliers: Soviets—53 percent; France—20 percent; China—7 percent; Brazil—4 percent; Egypt—4 percent; Czechoslovakia—2 percent; Others (made up of U.S., Germany, Britain, South Africa, Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia)—10 percent.

While I suppose it cannot be argued that the United States has made some serious blunders in its foreign policy, history teaches us that the same has been true of many other great nations. Personally, given the choice, I would rather have the U.S. as a neighbour of Canada than most other countries in this world.

Haliburton.

SPORTS

PINESTONE BONSPIEL a sweeping success

The Haliburton Highlands Curling Club played host to this annual bonspiel on Friday night and Saturday. Twenty-two teams from Haliburton County and surrounding area took part in some exciting matches. Because points were earned, competition was intense — Friday's curling didn't finish until 1:30 a.m.. Saturday night was a time for fellowship after the trophies were awarded

Bantams' easy win is hard to repeat

Haliburton's J.D. Robinson Bantams lead their best of five series with Gravenhurst two games to one. Last Tuesday the local boys skated to an easy 11-1 win to take a two game lead, on goals by Mike MacKenzie, Kevin Morissette, Corbie Kent, Paul Hewitt, Jamie Keefer, Mark Stamp and Greg Stamp, but things were quite a bit different when they returned to Gravenhurst on Sunday for game three.

Gravenhurst opened the scoring at 12:56 of the first period but Haliburton evened it up 45 seconds later. At the six minute mark of the second period Haliburton took a 2-1 lead, the only time they were ahead in the game. In the span of five minutes Gravenhurst regained the lead with two quick goals. With six seconds left in the period Haliburton came back to tie the score at three.

The score remained deadlocked until the eleven minute mark of the third period when Gravenhurst moved ahead. Haliburton applied a lot of pressure in the final two minutes of the game but were unable to tie the score, as Gravenhurst won 4-3.

Haliburton's goals were scored by Greg Stamp, Kevin Morissette and Jeff Black.

Atoms closer to top

Haliburton Tri-County Atoms began their play-offs last Wednesday with a shutout win against Bobcaygeon. The game started off with a goal scored by Brett Wilson, assisted by Amy Wood and Kevin Harrison. To round out the scoring, Haliburton's third goal came from Neil Paul, assisted by Sean Irvine. The shutout was also credited to the outstanding goal tending by Andrew Baker, and was also a strong start for the team as a whole, as they entered round-robin playoffs.

Sunday February 10 saw Haliburton host Warsaw in the second play-off game. The first goal scored by Jonathan Consack and assisted by Luke Cowen and Matt Thompson, was quickly answered by a return goal from Warsaw. Two unassisted goals by Brett Wilson were also quickly matched by a determined Warsaw team. The score remained tied deep into the third period when a goal by Jason Henry, assisted by Sean Irvine and Luke Cowen, put Haliburton into the lead again. Steady pressure came from Warsaw as they pulled their goalie for an extra attacker. With the time running out and the pressure on, a goal by Sean Irvine, assisted by Jason Henry and Brett Wilson, put Haliburton firmly in the lead.

The scoring was rounded out with a hat-trick goal by Brett Wilson, assisted by Jason Henry. These two games still leave the team far from the end of the play-off series but give them a positive step towards success.

Wilberforce hosts exciting games

On Sunday, February 10, teams from Apsley, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay and Bancroft (two teams) arrived in Wilberforce to compete along with the local team in the annual Novice House League Tournament. Each team played three games. Brooklin Concrete of Haliburton provided team trophies as well as individual momentos and MVP awards for each game.

MVP medallions were awarded as follows: Wilberforce — Ryan Simioni, Jamie Quirion and Behn Barker; Apsley — Trevor Kashack, Denver Tucker and Brandon Campbell; Bancroft IGA — Derek Parks, Justin Scott and Tim Degeer; Bancroft Robinson Haulage — Adam Kavanagh, Shane Card and Tim Crick; Bobcaygeon — Billy Gage, Shane Bracey and Joey Robson; Lindsay — Evan MacCormack, Aaron O'Neill and Justin Allison.

The tournament ended with Apsley winning the A Division over Bancroft IGA, 4 to 0, Bancroft's Robinson Haulage taking the B Division from Wilberforce 7 to 4, and Lindsay edging out Bobcaygeon for the C Championship by 2 to 1.

One highlight was a triple shut out for the Apsley goaltender, BJ Wilson who received a Mr. Zero award for his efforts. (No goals against in three games.)

Thanks to Brooklin Concrete's support, this was a successful tournament.

Puck hogs, cravats, Bible add flair to hockey night

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by: CHIP TRUEMAN

SO YOU WANT to be a millionaire? Okay, here's what you do. Have someone truck in ten yards of dirt and make a mound in your backyard. Put a piece of rubber on that mound. Now, approximately sixty feet away, lay down another hunk of rubber. Call it a plate. For the next ten years, practice throwing a baseball from the mound to the plate. Yes, you may have to get someone to catch the ball for you, but if all goes well maybe he will become a millionaire too. What exactly am I getting at? Roger Clemens that's what! Last week the "hurler" signed with the Sox for $20 mill over four years. Surely, with a bit of practice, your odds of getting into the majors are better than lotto 6/49's 14 million to 1.

Back to hockey. Haliburton's M.H.L. playoff competition continued on Sunday with Roberts-Austin Fuels and Curry Motors facing off in game one. I would have expected a closer score in this one, but the outcome does not surprise me. After three periods of play Curry Motors walked away with two points. They defeated the fuelmen by a whopping 13-4. Puck hogs included Andy Hodgson (4), Chris Hodgson (3), Ron Perin (2), Andy Hodgson, Erin Bain, Hardy Kraft and Ken Riley. Roberts-Austin's four goals came from Erin Nichols with two and Steve Roberts and Wade MacInnes with one each. As a result, the fuelmen slip to 2 and 2. The motormen improve to 3 and 1.

Game two ended in a cravat. At least that's how my thesaurus would describe it. Emmerson Lumber scored five times — Youngdale Fuels scored five times — that's a cravat. The outcome has left Emmerson's pretty well out of the running, but a glimmer of hope still remains for Youngdale's.

Their record is now 2-1-1. However the big winner of this game was Greg Bridge as he scored a hat trick to aid in Emmerson Lumber's tie. He looked like Rocky Balboa as he came off the ice calling Andrea ... Andrea! Other lumbermen points came from Derrell Stamp and Rick Wood. Ringers for the oilmen were Tom Curry, Gary Burtch, Glen Scully, Tim Chambers and Peter Fearrey.

I can not begin to describe the action in game three. Elstone Motors, the Davey of the league, took on Vasey Insurance — the Goliath. Many stones, a couple of slingshots and a bag of gravel later, it was all over. Unlike the biblical tale however, Dave did not do too well. Elstone Motors were one goal short of a maximum upset. Vasey's won the game 6-5, but Elstone's showed the entire western world that "the brokers can be beaten". Hurling rocks for Elstone's were Kim Emmerson (3), Greg Bishop and Dan Curry. Snarling and looking mean for Vasey's were Kevin Phillips (3), Bernie Upton, Dan Ambridge and Glenn Fick. The brokers remain undefeated.

Haliburton Lumber keeps plugging away. This week they defeated Bishop and Wilson 8-5. The game was close until the third when B&W simply ran out of steam, having only five skaters all night. Ron Yake was the superstar for the lumbermen. He accounted for five of the team's eight. The other three came from Barry Boice and Wade Stamp. Meanwhile on the other side, Journeyman Joe, Travellin' Tran and Tiny Tim scored for the surveyors.

That's it for another week. I must go. A tandem truck just pulled into my yard. Adam! Mackenzie! Come on, put your catcher's mitts on and meet me out back.

I'm Chip and that was ... THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

PeeWees advance to next round

The Keith Jackson Real Estate PeeWees beat Beaverton 3-2 on Friday night to advance to the second round of the O.M.H.A. Playdowns.

Jackie Morrison led off the scoring at 6:41 of the second period on a fine solo rush. Derek Glendinning put Haliburton ahead 2-0 on a nifty set up by Jon Hebert and Tim Keefer.

Beaverton came out quickly in the third period with goals by Sean Saunders and Cory Garringer. Haliburton went ahead for keeps when Jon Hebert fought off a check and banged in a goal mouth pass from Tim Keefer, who had been set up by Derek Glendinning.

Both teams deserve credit for this hard fought series that took six intense, gruelling games!

Haliburton's next opposition will be Deseronto. Game One and Game Two of the series will take place in Deseronto on Saturday February 16 at 3:30 p.m. and on Sunday February 17 at 3:00 p.m. The series will return to Haliburton on Friday February 22 at 8:00 p.m. and on Saturday February 23 at 7:00 p.m. (if necessary). A fifth and deciding game would be played on Sunday February 24 (if necessary).

Novices begin play-offs with a shut-out

February rolled around and all of the teams in the Haliburton OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies' division were looking at a heavy schedule of playoff games. All, that is, except for the Huskies and Beaverton. Their first playoff round is a best two out of three series to be completed over four weeks.

The opening game of the playoff round was played in Beaverton on February 4. The closeness of the teams was evident in the first period as both squads worked hard at keeping the other off the scoreboard.

In the second period the Huskies opened it up. Early in the period defenseman Bobby Hebert kept the puck in the Beaverton end where Mike Craigen made a fine effort picking the puck off the boards, carrying it in front of the net and slipping it past the goalie. Midway through the second Chris Nimigon fired the puck down the ice, where it caught up with Kenny Ablett, who broke in and shot on net. The rebound was snagged by Mike Morissette and he fired it home. To close the period defenseman Jamie Johnston cleared the puck from Haliburton's end up to Greg Forgrave. Forgrave then one-handed it ahead to Craigen, who went in all alone and beat the goal tender.

In the third period the Huskies had their chances but the team, including Ryan Wood and Devon Dart, kept Beaverton at bay, helping goalie Brian Mulholland to earn a 3-0 shutout.

Tykes prove their mettle against rival Fenelon Falls

Haliburton's Minor Tykes and their counterparts from Fenelon Falls have played close games all year, and when the Falls team came to town last Saturday, the match was no exception.

Cory Sisson opened the scoring for Haliburton with a nice feed from Ryan Goldenberg and Chris Bishop. Then it was Goldenberg netting his first goal of the season, set up by Dustin Prindville and Matthew Marlin.

Chris Bishop then put Haliburton up by three when he made the most of a pass from Jeff Packard and Jamie Sala.

Jeff Packard scored the final goal of the game when he took a pass from Cory Sisson and Matthew Marlin and deposited it behind the Fenelon goalie.

Jason Chambers earned his second shutout of the year in the Haliburton net, bringing his goals against average to just 2.29.

The Loop comes to life during weekend's carnival at Highland Grove are preparing for their dog parade. It's a superb, sunny day. About 10 dogs are entered, all gaily attired. After lining up at the Highland Grove Community Centre, they follow the bright red fire truck to the main part of town, have pictures taken and return to be judged.

The dogs are greatly exhilarated by all this fuss and there is much barking and challenging of other contenders. A very large dog seems utterly bored by the proceedings and takes advantage of every chance to lie and rest. One dog is dressed in a grey sweater, he also wears bright green earmuffs and a pair of sunglasses. Another tiny pooch prances in a fancy ruffled dress. We don't see dogs in blue jeans. Everyone present in the crowd is given a vote, using the number attached to the costumes. Winner turns out to be a beagle in a colourful jester's costume. Second place goes to a spaniel wearing a saddle that supports a miniature Snoopy.

Back at the Wilberforce Arena a Novice tournament is taking place. One game witnessed saw Bancroft over Lindsay with a score of 3-0. We were impressed with youngsters collecting admission fees at the door. No one would ever sneak past those eagle eyes without paying. Very expert they were at making change.

Other interesting events took place such as ice cube contest and the cross country skiing that many enjoyed.

Everyone agrees that the great success of this Carnival is due mainly to the efforts of Hilda Clark, who possesses that rare quality of leadership that is able to seek out and recognize available talent and kindle the enthusiasm to bring it all together in a united community spirit.

pose the trapper had not started out as a trapper.

His story completed, Don asked if he could help with dinner but his hosts had it well in hand, despite Don's distractions. As Kate finished setting the table, she turned to Rick and wondered aloud what it would be like to live in a trapper's cabin, just the two of them. Rick couldn't imagine such a basic existence but saw the appeal of being so close to nature. Don thought it was a terrible thought and threatened both of them that if they ever decided to do it, they could forget about him coming over for dinner. And then who'd tell them stories?

Maybe he had been a businessman or even a tea her who had become fed up with civilized society and decided to turn his back on all of it and reduce his life to simple, basic terms and values. Did he crave solitude for a troubled spirit? Had he run away from a tragic love affair? Don's eyes sparkled as he dangled these unanswered questions before his listeners.

All speculation aside, for no one will ever know the full story, the fact remained that they stayed together and so must have been happy. Every year they'd go to the fur auctions and got to be quite the topic of conversation. Someone who had known the woman back when she was a school teacher saw them one day. It was in Toronto. The two of them were walking down the street, side by side, covered from neck to ankle in the thickest, most perfect beaver fur coat she had ever seen. She was heard to say later that they looked like two fur-covered peas in a pod.

Hydro offers new lighting

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Ontario Hydro can provide a couple of high pressure sodium lights for Haliburton's streets to show that the village won't be aglow in yellow if the municipality chooses to switch to the more energy efficient lighting.

Along with cost, the colour of lighting has been among council's main concerns about Hydro's program to replace mercury and fluorescent streetlights. The latest sodium lights have clearer light, and Jim Davis of the Minden office told council Monday a few can be installed to judge the effect.

As well, Davis said switching to the new system will prevent the municipality from being "fleeced" by paying two maintenance charges. At present, Dysart pays Hydro an annual maintenance fee for its 287 lights in the Minden district. (Harcourt's lights are in Bancroft's jurisdiction.) For speedier service, however, it also pays a contractor to maintain the lights, in effect, paying for the same service twice.

"We don't want Dysart paying twice, we have a moral obligation (not to let it continue)."

Another problem with the present system, he added, is that the contractor isn't qualified to work so close to Hydro's main power lines. Unless they get a power line maintenance certificate, contractors are supposed to stay 10' away from the phase conductors.

"Who's doing it now really shouldn't be doing it," Davis said.

It's believed no one in the county has the certificate, and if council opts for Hydro's incentive switch to high pressure sodium lights, it will need written proof that the contractor is certified.

Dysart is now paying $37,500 a year for streetlight energy, plus $2,755 for maintenance, said Harold Parker of the regional office in Barrie. Energy costs are expected to go up by 15 per cent again next year — eight per cent in Hydro costs plus seven per cent GST. With the new lights, the municipality's energy costs would be approximately $20,500 a year.

Hydro will pay 25 per cent of the estimated $100,000 cost of the switchover. With reduced energy and maintenance costs, council should be able to pay off the balance in four years, Parker said. All but two of the 287 lights would be replaced if council opts for the plan.

Skateboarding by-law is revoked

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

There's no sense having a by-law if you aren't going to enforce it, some Dysart councillors said as they struck down a former by-law prohibiting skateboarding on downtown streets.

"If we have it in place, someone's got to enforce it," said

Councillor John Parish, and that includes signing the streets. "If we don't follow the by-law and someone gets hurt, we'll be liable."

"You can't limit them but certainly we can encourage them to use safer places," said Councillor Murray Fearrey, who said he almost ran over a skateboarder who darted out near Emmerson Lumber last summer. There have also been near misses on York Street, prompting council last fall to prohibit skateboards on the downtown Haliburton's busy sidewalks.

It was hoped a skateboard "park" could be set up inside the arena, but arena manager Don Lloyd feels the cement would not support it.

"If we have a problem, we have more of a responsibility than just saying 'You can't skateboard here,'" said Reeve Bill Davis, who along with Fearrey voted against rescinding the by-law.

Eclectic musical fare the attraction of Trio Vivant

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

CATHERINE WILSON'S LOVE of music did not come from studying it at university. It didn't even come from sitting on her mother's knee, although that did help. Technique can be learned, but not the voice which allows you to speak with the written notes on the sheet.

"It's just part of me and what makes me happy," says the pianist who will be arriving for a Haliburton concert on Sunday, February 24. "If I don't play, I'm not doing something that's integral to who I am."

So it's not unnatural that her music takes on its own flavour. What people in the industry find surprising is that she has so many musical tastes: the Haliburton concert of Catherine Wilson's Trio Vivant will include the classical pieces one associates with a piano, cello and violin, but will mix in a little ragtime, a sprinkling of Gershwin and the odd touch of contemporary music.

"Most classical pianists can't play ragtime," Wilson says in a telephone interview. Sure they might know the technique, "but you can't practice for the feel... What sets me apart is my versatility in styles."

Trained as a classical pianist — her mother first taught her to play — it wasn't until university that she was really introduced to the other musical expressions. Instead of turning up her nose, "I found I had an affinity for them." Some artists will include the other styles in their repertoire because that's what the audience wants; Wilson does it "because I love them. It's been a natural evolution. (And) audiences aren't stupid. They can tell if it's not authentic."

When she first formed the trio in 1981 — they also have their own separate music careers — "the violinist (Marie Berard) and cellist (Amanda Forsyth) had never played a rag in their life, but we came to do it very well and on top of that, it was a lot of fun."

"Technical wizards" can play all the right notes and you have to admire them for their accomplishments. That doesn't make them good performers, however. "Have they made music and are people really moved by what they've just heard?" Wilson asks. "You have to have technical finesse, talent is a given, and there must be a proper affinity for the music. The less common thing is that the soul be there. If you've got all these things, you've got a concert that's lasting and memorable. That's the ideal."

Rather than diffuse her talent, Wilson finds the styles complement each other. You don't play Bach as if he were Scott Joplin, but you are more aware of where the music — and your talents — can take you.

"The more you perform of any one style, the more you know what you can do and the more and more comfortable and free you become. The one style helps the other. It gives you ideas for every style of playing... It's what the performer can get out of the music while at the same time remaining stylistically true."

A few years ago, she took part in a birthday celebration for Eubie Blake. "I was different," says the woman who's accustomed to being different among her classical peers.

'You must communicate the soul of the music,' says Catherine Wilson, centre, here with Amanda Forsyth and Marie Berard, who perform February 24.

Other attributes include composing for the CBC radio series "The Scales of Justice", a solo performance at the annual Scott Joplin Festival in Missouri, a concert for the queen, and an album with John Arpin, "Rags to Riches." Trio Vivant has also recorded the very successful "Palm Court Pleasures" and last week cut "Palm Court Encores", which will be available soon. A classical album is also being planned.

"You must communicate the soul of the music."

It's art and has to speak to people," she says of what she endeavours to achieve. For the first concert piece, she's usually nervous. As she relaxes and realizes the audience is enjoying the music and want to be there, a concert becomes an enjoyable, albeit wordless, conversation.

Trio Vivant's performance on February 24 is part of the Haliburton County Concert Series. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Haliburton Legion, using the new Grand piano. Tickets at the door for non-series holders are $15 for adults, and $10 for children.

Cupid's bow hits 50 years ago

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WITH ALL THE MODERN-DAY allure of "old fashioned" weddings, one would think that Wes and Ev Stata's exchange of vows 50 years ago was wrapped in a romantic veil of silk and lace.

Ha.
Forget the fact that in 1941 the Depression had just ended, only to be followed by World War II. And even though her wedding ensemble was blue — far more practical than white — it was one of the nicest outfits to be found in that year's Eaton's catalogue. Never mind that their "honeymoon" was being able to have the spare bedroom at her parents' house.

No, if the Statas' wedding was wrapped in anything, it was mud. Mud, mud, mud, and on April 5, 1941, more mud. Barnyard mud at that.

Perhaps it's because they can still laugh about it today that the Statas have a good Valentine's Day story to tell.

It's almost as if Murphy's Law was invented on

For Wes and Ev Stata, a sense of humour is the first prerequisite to marriage happiness.

April 5, 1941. Plans for the wedding, simple though they were, were carried out in secret because they still weren't sure young Ev's father would approve of the marriage. Tom Scott was a dour old Baptist and his "baby" daughter would turn 18 just two days before the wedding. Ev's intended was eight years older, and with Ev's young looks, people thought he was robbing the cradle.

Not that Tom Scott had anything against marriage — he'd been married three times himself. Born near Harcourt, he first married Rebecca Everson and had a son, Norman. She died and he married Mary Deacon, with whom he had a daughter, Leata (Mrs. Harry Sisson.) When she died, he brought his children north to Sudbury, where his parents were. Before he left, however, he had made the acquaintance of Clara Packard of Maple Lake. He kept writing to her, urging her to join him. The timing was perfect. Her parents had died when the family was young, leaving Clara to raise all of the children. After two of them married, she said "I'm not staying around for another wedding" and moved north to marry Tom Scott. Their son John was born in Sudbury but the rest of the children — Ben, Salina, Evelyn and Archie — were born at the homestead on the Kennisis Lake Road, next door to where the gravel pit is today. By the time Ev arrived in 1923, her father was in his fifties and her mother in her mid-forties.

"He was one of those old-time Baptists who believed in living the straight and narrow," Mrs. Stata remembers of her father. "We went to church three times on Sunday, went to Bible classes during the week, and weren't allowed to work or play on Sundays."

So he was a rather formidable character for the two lovebirds to approach about their wedding plans. If they married before she was 18, they needed his permission. Would he give it? Eventually they mustered up enough nerve and just a few days before the wedding, he went with them to get the license.

Although young, Ev Scott had been dating Wesley Stata for two years. He came from United Empire Loyalist stock, and his grandfather, Alonzo Stata — a German name — moved to Snowdon in 1854, where he married Margaret Smith of Baysville. Their children were Florence, Pearl,

Married five decades couple's romance is still strong

Wesley, Mary, Holly, Ken, Audrey and Betty.

When describing how young Ev and Wes first met, he says "She chased me in the bush in the deep snow and she caught me."

"There's a grain of truth in what he says," Mrs. Stata laughs.

The romance goes like this: Mr. Stata had left Snowdon to work at Hughey Griffin's camp on Centre (Pivot) Lake, just off the Kennisis Lake Road. Here he gained a bit of notoriety as the man who "could cant up both right and left."

What does that mean, they're asked to explain. A cant is the hook attached to a long pole they used to get logs moving. "I'm dextrous — I can do it like this" — Mr. Stata stands up and swings his arms to the left, holding an imaginary cant hook — "or like this" — he swings his arms to the right.

"He was left handed to start with and his teacher made him change to the right hand," his wife says, finishing off the explanation.

Mrs. Stata's youngest brother Archie used to chum around with one of the Griffin boys. "He was telling us about this guy who could cant up both left and right."

Believe it if you can, says Mrs. Stata looking over at her balding husband, but in those days he had a "big bushy head of red hair." Her sister Salina, who was cooking at the Scotts' camp, also had red hair, and Ev and Archie thought the two red heads would complement each other.

The camp was up in the bush so one Saturday, "me and some girlfriends, we struck out to walk up there but we went the long way, up by Grif-fins. I was hoping I'd get a look at (the canter.) There were not too many young single fellows available up there in those days.

"When we got up near the camp, here they had a tree right across the road." Reminiscing with her husband, she adds "You hitched your horse to the tree and took it right off the road. I thought he was pretty polite to move that darn log for us."

That was her first impression; what about his? "They were bundled up so badly you couldn't get a good look at them."

His second impression? "Once she got that big coat off she looked pretty good," he says.

"That's the first time you've told me that," she says in surprise.

The next time they saw each other was at a dance at Herc (Hercules) Barry's, young Ev's next-door neighbour. It was a wedding shower for Jim and Doris Cooper and Wes Stata came down with Jim Packard, who was Ev's uncle. (Relatives can be a blessing or a curse when courting and Ev has dozens of them in the area.)

"I hung around Uncle Jim all night but he wouldn't introduce me to Wes," she says. "I never even got a dance with him."

"A little later, I saw him at Charlie Sawyer's dance hall on Grass River, just below the cemetery. I saw him across this crowded room. He had these square shoulders and his red hair was sticking up on end. I was wishing he'd ask me to dance. Darn if he didn't come right over and ask the person beside me to dance."

"It would have been too obvious if I came over and asked you," he laughs. He got his come-uppance anyway: "She turned up her nose at him so he asked me to dance."

That night, because it was so late and it was a long way back to the camp, she took him home with her and he slept with her brother John. From then on, they were a pair.

"I used to walk down from Griffin's and all the dogs would tell her I was coming," he says, to which she adds, "Here's kids would taunt him. They'd make a hole in a snowbank with a whole bunch of snowballs and they'd throw them at him. We had a great big Collie dog named Rover, and he'd go up and meet him. Rover was on his side."

"Cats, dogs, kids and old women, they all like me," he smiles.

After walking down to see her every second night, in February 1941 he gave her a ring which he had ordered out of the Eaton's catalogue. He was earning $30 a month plus board and he didn't spend much on entertainment, nor gas for a car which he didn't own.

Finally, two days after her 18th birthday, they married at her parents' home.

"The whole thing was a schmozzle," she laughs. "The frost had just gone out of the ground and at our place, you had to come up through the barnyard to get to the house. The minister, John Bee, brought his wife, and she had these thin little shoes on. They had to park the car in the barnyard."

Not only was the barnyard slick with mud, but the cows' winter contributions were beginning to melt, too. "It was rich, put it that way," Mr. Stata says of the mud.

His friend Archie Walker was supposed to be his best man. They waited, and waited, and he never showed up. They phoned around and it turned out his car had got stuck to the axle in mud and he couldn't make it. When her brother John agreed to be best man, Ev didn't think it was fair to have her sister be her maid of honour. As it was, none of his family were able to make the 30-mile trip, and she thought he'd feel left out.

"My girlfriend was there so she wore my sister's dress and was my bridesmaid. Oh, everything just fell right out.

"My dress was blue, with navy shoes, gloves and lace-type hat with a pink rose on it. I had sent away for them from the Eaton's catalogue. The shoes were suede with the tongue turned over. Oh, they were so tight they almost killed me.

"I never really believed I was getting married till I went down the stairs and came to the altar, which was the sewing machine," she says. It was a large box-type machine and they had draped it with a tablecloth. The minister stood on one side, the couple on the other.

That night there was a dance at the Orange Hall at Maple Lake, across from the United Church. "We often say we broke it down," Mrs. Stata says of the building which no longer exists. Certainly many cars broke down as drivers tried to get through the mud. Many didn't succeed, including the fiddler and guitar player who were supposed to provide the music.

Instead of a honeymoon, the newlyweds moved into the spare bedroom downstairs at the Scott house. A week later, Mr. Stata went to Whitby where he had a job at a box factory. Mrs. Stata stayed at home, collecting their possessions. They had a grand total of $78 to begin their marriage with.

"We came along at the worse time but we never looked back," he says of the tough sledding of those early years. His wife remembers their first house: "We put big boxes on the walls for cupboards and put curtains across the middle to divide the bedroom from the living room. Then we wallpapered the boxes, put up matching curtains, and put linoleum on the floor. It wasn't too bad, like a play house, you know?"

They were living in an apartment in Dr. Norman Bethune's house in Oshawa, when Mr. Stata got the call to go into the army. By this time, the older men were needed as well and he quickly signed up with 16th Field Company, RCE, 3rd Division. Just as he was about to leave, they found out she was pregnant. They stored all their things in a garage on a lot in Oshawa they had bought and after they parted, she went home to West Guilford.

"I stayed at my parents in the summer, and his parents in the winter for three years," Mrs. Stata says. "I was lonesome, sad and worried because you didn't know if he was going to make it back."

It must have been less than idyllic spending those first years of motherhood living with her parents and in-laws, her husband off fighting a war in Europe. "I'll say, you bet your boots. It's tough bringing up a child with grandparents. His parents were too lenient and mine were too strict. I wouldn't recommend that for anyone. . . But I never considered I was hard done by. I never felt sorry for myself."

On Boxing Day, 1945, Mr. Stata arrived from Halifax and saw his son for the first time. "'There's my daddy,' Richard said when Wes got off the train. You brought him something, didn't you," Mrs. Stata asks her husband. "Oh, a couple of chocolate bars, I think," he answers.

The young family — daughter Sharon would be born New Year's Eve, 1946 — moved into the garage on Fern Hill while Mr. Stata built their house on the same property. "We could turn his hand to just about anything which was pretty handy and saved us a lot of money over the years."

Time — and war — changes people, and for the first while, "we had to learn to get to know each other all over again," says Mrs. Stata. "He always says he lost the best years of his wife by going overseas."

His soldiering also made him lose his hair. "In the summer with the steel helmet, it just about fried your brains out. My hair came out in clumps and it never grew back. I always say grass doesn't grow on a busy street."

They stayed here until "we decided we could make a fortune in the bowling alley business because we thought there was nothing to it except taking in the money. We learned different." Avid bowlers, they stayed with it for three years in Port Perry — he built the alley — and then moved back to Oshawa where he got a job at Gay Construction. Most of the contracts were with General Motors, building and fixing its Oshawa plants.

After breathing in industrial dirt and smoking for 40 years, Mr. Stata's emphysema and bronchitis made him take an early retirement in 1973. Although Mrs. Stata thought she would be bored to tears, they moved to their cottage on the north side of Grass Lake. Eventually it was too damp there so they moved to the Kennis Lake Road, but that was too much work in the winter, so they put their names in at Parklane Apartments, where they have become popular fixtures.

Mrs. Stata found many ways to keep busy. She's active in her church — Maple Lake United — and was one of the founding members of Home Support and later, the Drop-In Centre. She does line dancing, helps others in the building, and is often seen walking along Head Lake for exercise.

Unfortunately, his sensitivity to cigarette smoke makes it almost impossible for him to go anywhere.

"If it wasn't for this tobacco smoke problem, we could have a ball," says Mr. Stata. His wife adds, "Work will never kill you but it can make your old age miserable."

On Saturday, April 6, their children are hosting a 50th Anniversary tea at Parklane. Of course, the Statas are asked the secret to their marriage's success.

"He has always cherished me," says Mrs. Stata, blushing. "He always looked after me, I never had to go out to work. I had my back out and he nursed me for the month."

"You've got to have self-respect before you can get respect from others," Mr. Stata says. "That's the main ingredient for the whole bang up."

There are other things they enjoy, such as love, and trust, and an ability to find humour in things. Considering the way their wedding turned out, humour is probably the first thing they learned they'd have to share. However, Mr. Stata admits: "the next half a century is going to be harder."

Ontarians asked how Canada should change for the better

DRAINVILLE'S DIARY

MPP
Dennis Drainville

THESE ARE NOT happy times in many parts of the world. There is of course a war going on that has us concerned and troubled. Closer to home we have a recession that is causing heartache for many Ontario citizens. Canadians in general are dispirited now and are not interested in the continuing constitutional debate. They are feeling somewhat exhausted by the events of last summer. But surely this is the time to accept the call to be a good citizen and take the time to get involved in this very important debate.

The provincial government has released its public discussion paper, called "CHANGING FOR THE BETTER — An invitation to talk about a new Canada". This is an opportunity for all citizens to actually get involved with the questions around the constitution. What do we really want of our country, our province, and our relationships with other provinces. Remember the criticism of the last round (Meech Lake), was partly based on the fact that there was little public involvement with the process, and that the people were never consulted. This government takes an entirely different approach in that we want to hear from the people. The discussion paper is available through my office and I encourage every one to read it.

As well, the government's Select Committee on Ontario in Confederation is travelling the province over the next months to get input from all people. The committee should be sitting in Peterborough on Feb. 27. I will be attending and hope to see many Victoria-Haliburton opinions represented there.

Remember this is far too important an issue to leave to the legislators alone, please become part of the process.

I also want to share with readers something about how this Legislative process works in this province. In a Parliamentary democracy we are ruled by laws. They are the foundation of how we work with people in society.

Just as an example, The Health Act is a law. If you want to improve the delivery of health care, first you have to pass legislation that will become the law. The legislative process is open and provides an opportunity for all Members of the Assembly to study and debate the issue. All bills are passed by the Assembly before they become law, which is then translated into the way government interacts with the people. It is a long process to get law passed. Each bill is introduced into the House by the Government. It then goes through First and Second Reading and on to the Committee Stage, where it goes through a clause by clause examination, and possible amendments. It is then brought back to the House for third Reading, with its amendments. By that stage, the bill has been well debated and perhaps changed and it is now up to the Members to state their support or opposition and to go on to the third reading. At that point, the new bill will become law. It then goes to the ceremonial phase, Royal Assent and Proclamation. The Lieutenant Governor signs the bill and it is then Proclaimed by the Cabinet, at which point it becomes a law in effect in Ontario.

Hill is the scene of much hilarity

W. GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

The Chumbley Hill was the scene of hilarity, noise and enjoyment in general as the Sisson and Chumbley families hosted a toboggan party for St. Andrew's Church children, and any of the adults who braved the bumps and slopes.

Valerie Chumbley made the snow taffy which was scooped onto the snow in front of each hungry snowslider. Ken Chumbley provided the dozens of doughnut bits, which were passed around in big bowls for all to enjoy.

Observers included the Ron Sissons, Kevin and Bev Sisson, John and Florajean Phillips, Janet Bain, Carol and Michael Brown, David and Leslie Chumbley, who hosted the event, and the Brian Plouffe family.

Several children from the nearby neighbourhood joined the fun which included GT snow racers, snow boards, a huge inner tube, which carried four or five shrieking kids around on its course downhill, and of course, toboggans.

The event was scheduled from 1 to 4 p.m., but no one wanted to leave when the time came, so the afternoon of perfect winter weather and fun can be termed an unqualified success. Now if the weatherman gives us this same consideration for the Halibur-ton Winter Carnival this weekend, it will indeed be a blessing to all.

Welcome back to the Rapsons who have been in Barbados for a month.

Scottish country dancers and a few Highland dancers gathered at the West Guilford Centre on Saturday for a pot luck supper and dancing. The evening was staged to honour Ted Carson, one of our dancers upon his retirement following his sale of The Wool Shop in Minden. His wife, Mimi, and their daughter, Stephanie, were able to be present with granddaughters, Alison and Meghan.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Tourism needs local base Spirited week ahead

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE
by: SHAWN HAGERMAN

LAST WEEK, we talked about the inherent problems associated with the Ontario Government's OTAP program under which we are included in the Central Ontario Region. The OTAP Program started back in the '70s and was a government bureaucratic-driven program that divided the province into 12 different tourist regions. Flipping through their glossy "Ontario Incredible" travel guide, it doesn't take long to notice that we in Haliburton are not alone in this mish-mash approach to selling tourism in Ontario.

Take Area 2, named "Festival Country". Waterloo and Kitchener are in with Orangeville, north of Toronto and the Niagara on the Lake "Shaw Festival" as a tourist destination area. The internationally famous Stratford Festival, 25 odd miles down the road from Waterloo, incredibly, is not in Festival Country. Waterloo has the accommodation space for many visiting the Stratford Festival, but in this government brochure, all that is promoted is the Shaw Festival, 130 kms. away. Stratford is lumped in with Windsor in Area 1, 230 kms. away, "Southwestern Ontario" with the title "The Garden of Ontario". It is truly bizarre.

What the Chamber is proposing with a Rural Tourism Development Foundation is simple. Haliburton County is a large unique and diverse tourism destination area. Many in Haliburton County are tired of riding on the back of COTA for tourism promotion.

We have nothing in common with urban areas such as Oshawa, nor for that matter the Kawartha's or Bay of Quinte Area. We went on Federally and Provincially funded agency that is going to start promoting our own wilderness area. Our report to the Ministry of Tourism stated "The mandate of the foundation would be concentrated in boosting tourism in rural regions. It would develop and implement programs and strategies to attract visitors to remote and outlying areas beyond Metropolitan Toronto."

The committee proposes a board of Provincial and Federal Ministry representatives, as well as Educational, Chamber, Economic Development and Resorts Ontario representatives. Funding could come from provincial and federal government, private and corporate sponsors.

With the recent change in provincial government, now is the best time to examine what has worked and not worked in the past. We need to begin with fresh ideas that will lay the ground work for promoting tourism in the 90's. In the upcoming month, the Chamber has planned meetings with representatives both from federal and provincial Ministers of Tourism. We will keep you posted on their responses.

Watch for notice of World Day of Prayer for your area. It's March 1st at St. Andrew's at 2 p.m. for our area. The women of Kenya put together the program for this year, which is shared by Christian groups around the world on the same day. Do you know anyone who would be knowledgeable and available to speak to us briefly on this occasion? Please give me a call if you do.

Rehearsals have begun for "Breath of Spring", the Highlands Little Theatre's next production to be presented in May. As usual, it's fun learning a new part, this time under the direction of Chris Lynd. As usual, too, we can use whoever would like to become part of the stage crew. Volunteers contact any Little Theatre person.

Dorsey and Rowena Cooper of Burk's Falls spent the weekend at their son Wayne's house.

Kay Pearsell and my sister, June Campbell of Barrie, were visitors here on Tuesday and Wednesday last week.

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

I KNOW IT'S BEEN a long time since my column appeared but I have been very busy with Christmas and then those dreadful exams. So I haven't had the opportunity to sit down at my typewriter.

Exams have come and gone and we will be receiving our report cards this week. Always a cheerful thing.

This Friday is the Valentine's Dance. Be sure to attend. I also hope everyone bought a carnation to send to their girl or boyfriend. By doing this you will help the grad committee raise money.

Spirit Week, crammed with contests, dress up days, and other activities, is the best week in the school year. We are fortunate enough to have this next week. One of the events is a beard growing contest. It actually started this week with clean shaven students having to report on Monday to Room 18. Next week the person (hopefully male) with the longest scruff on his face wins. There will also be a Nintendo contest, air bands at lunch, hat day, Maui day, tie day, and a sure-to-be-revolting food eating contest. I've heard rumours of what the food is to be and it could prove to be even more disgusting than the pie eating contest.

Then of course on Friday there will be Carnival Day and students will be able to participate in the event they have chosen, such as skiing, bowling, Camp Wanakita, ice fishing, swimming and a snooker tournament.

I hope everyone signed up so Carnival Day can be a success! Do you agree with our school dress code? Do you think it's unnecessary and unfair? Or do you think it's necessary to keep students in line? Read next week for an indepth report.

Smoking: a major heartbreaker

You've probably heard a lot about the benefits of quitting smoking. Smoking is a very serious risk to your health, and to the health of people around you. In fact, it's getting harder to smoke. New laws are coming into effect that will limit when and where you can smoke.

There are many good reasons to quit smoking, but quitting can be hard to do.

Improving your odds against Canada's #1 killer

Winning the battle against smoking takes a lot of effort, but the benefits from quitting are well worth it. You:

- ▼ reduce the risk of heart disease, stroke, lung cancer and other lung diseases.
- ▼ reduce the health risk to the people around you — your family, friends and co-workers, who are exposed to second-hand smoke.
- ▼ have fresher breath, and your clothes, car, and home won't smell of cigarette smoke.
- ▼ save lots of money!

You can join the almost 5 million Canadians who have quit. Start planning to quit now!

Your local Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario chapter has details on quitting.

THANK YOU to everyone who sent cards, gifts, and warm wishes to me during my recent stay at the Peterborough Civic Hospital. A special thank you to the Dawbush Class, all my friends and the staff at Victoria Street School. The clown was a great surprise. My hockey team was a great support too. The nurses, doctors, Child Life staff and many visitors were able to make my stay very comfortable. They tell me to be careful for two months, but after that — look out! Kori Roberts and Family.
